As a Georgia Power business recruitment director, Mr. Stallworth is responsible for facilitating the location, expansion, or start-up of businesses wishing to invest in Georgia. Charles assists companies in identifying potential buildings or sites throughout the state; he also provides market evaluation, construction information, engineering assistance, and serves as a liaison between the businesses and governmental agencies in the site selection process.

Charles started his career with Georgia Power in 1986 as a lab technician at one of the company's power plants. He transferred into the environmental affairs department in 1991, where his responsibilities included regulatory policy implementation and coordinating environmental risk assessments associated with new power plant siting efforts. Charles joined the economic development team in 2002.

Charles graduated from the University of West Florida with a Bachelor of Science degree in Chemistry and has earned a Masters in Business Administration from Georgia State University. He is a past board member of the Georgia Economic Developers Association and currently serves on the boards of the Korea Southeast United States Chamber of Commerce and the Japan-America Society of Georgia, as well as the advisory boards of Georgia Automotive Manufacturers Association and Quick Start, Georgia's award-winning workforce development program.

Charles is married and has two children. In his free time, he enjoys traveling and golf.
